J. KELLY, manager of the Omaha Mining Co., who intend going to work on a large scale in the gold washing industry on the river here, came in on last train from the States with his wife and family. Mr. Kelly spent some time in the department last year and is confident that this summer will see a great boom in the placer mining industry on the Saskatchewan. Many miners in the States, men who are backed by capital, are watching with great interest the results of the operations to commence when spring opens, and when the department at last decides to allow claims to be filed Mr. Kelly predicts that the river will be alive with miners and their machinery. At present the black sand of the Saskatchewan and the Fort Steele country are creating more interest in the States than the Kootenay or Slokan.

It was decided to call for tenders for the erection of two skimming stations, one at Fort Saskatchewan and one at the Sturgeon River.

REVELSTOCK HERALD: "Complaints are being made of frozen potatoes being brought in recently from Edmonton. Our illicite-waist correspondent mentions the same thing. The farmers of Alberta may as well make up their minds at once that if they want the Kootenay market they have got to ship in nothing but their best produce and to make sure it is the best before sending it. Any carelessness or smart Alec business on their part will simply result in a total loss of the trade." [In all probability these potatoes were frozen in transportation as a car load was shipped to the Kootenay a short time ago, which had been loaded while the thermometer was considerable below freezing and this, while not being of much consolation to the man who bought them, should free the shippers from any suspicion of "Smart Alec" work.—Ed.]

SESSION NOTES.

OTTAWA, March 27th, '97.

Instead of the usual short and formal meeting on the second day of the session, Friday was fully occupied.
A perfect storm of petitions responded to the speaker's request for their presentation.

Russell, Halifax, moved the address in reply to the speech from the throne, which was merely an echo of the speech, in a well worded, well thought-out and carefully delivered address.
He did not expect a lengthy discussion. The country was agreed as to the principles of the policy laid down, but there might be discussion as to details. The country was tired of political agitation. Too much of the vitality of the country had been exhausted in the past in mere agitation.
He spoke of Sir Charles Tupper's claims to consideration for past services and hoped he would be spared many years to occupy his present position. He spoke of Hon. Mr. Laurier's moderate and christian course in the difficulties which surrounded his present position, and asserted a benefit to both parliament and country as a result. Speaking of the tariff. At one time all parties held that as a tax it was an evil to be minimized, but the conservatives diverged from that view and held under the national policy that instead of an evil it was a good. The logical conclusion of their belief was that even if no taxation were necessary, and no revenue was needed, a tariff would still be in the public interest. When he asserted that Canada's tariff should be framed on strictly Canadian lines, he was applauded by both sides of the house. The proposed extension of the Intercolonial railway to Montreal would be in the interests of Halifax and St. John as winter ports of the Dominion.

Ethier, Two Mountains, seconded the address in reply, in a graceful and eloquent speech in French.

Sir Charles Tupper said that the address in reply was evidently preparing the house for a protectionist tariff.
He spoke at great length regarding the jubilee celebration, and very appreciatively of the part to be taken by Hon. Mr. Laurier. He objected to the statement in the address that a settlement of the Manitoba school question had been made. The government had no right to make such an announcement when the matter had not been submitted to parliament.
He wanted to know the authority for the statement that this settlement was the beginning of an era of peace and good will. There had always been peace and good will between the different races in Canada. He challenged the statement made at one time by Hon.
Mr. Laurier, that the Manitoba Catholics did better under the present settlement than they would have done under the remedial bill. After discussing the school matter for a long time his conclusion was that if it was settled, he was glad of it, as he would now be free from it. On the tariff, retaliation, and preferential trade questions he accused the liberals of stealing the conservative policy. He made an acrimonious attack on the government regarding dismissals from the civil service, and asserted that with the mining development going on in Canada the country could not fail to be prosperous, were it not for the uncertainty regarding the tariff. The proof of prosperity under the protective policy was that the exports for 1896 were the largest in the history of Canada. Liberal economy and capacity for administration was shown by the fact that there would probably be a deficit for the year of $3,000,000.

Hon. Mr. Laurier replied happily and eloquently to Sir Charles Tupper, but did not introduce any new matter.
After expressing his appreciation of kindly references of Sir Charles to himself in connection with the jubilee celebration, he alluded to the position taken by Sir Charles on the school question. If the government had no right to announce a settlement, it had no right to negotiate or attempt to negotiate a settlement without authority of parliament. Then in what position was the late government, led by Sir Charles, as to the commission sent by them to Manitoba. Either that attempt was a farce or the position now taken by Sir Charles was incorrect. The school settlement gave to the Catholics of Manitoba the right to teach their own religion in their own schools. He would like to have secured a settlement granting more completely their desires, but in the present state of public feeling in Manitoba that was impossible. Whatever might be the shortcomings of the settlement, he held, and the province of Quebec agreed, that what had been secured by conciliation was more valuable than any possible concessions that could possibly have been, only nominally, secured by coercion. Replying to Sir Charles's criticism that the bye-election in Champlain had been held back to allow of public opinion there being affected by the results in the liberal counties of Bonaventure and Wright, Hon. Mr.

Laurier said that the Bonaventure election was brought on quickly so as to catch the fishermen before they set out in the spring, and Champlain had been held back because a large part of the electors were away from home in the lumber woods. They would be at home when the election was held.
Regarding the insinuation that Mr.
Russell was the agent of the Canadian government at Rome, he challenged a direct assertion on the point, so that he might have the opportunity to answer it directly. Regarding civil service dismissals, he said the government had laid down the principle that no man was to be dismissed except for cause. That principle had been adhered to, and the thanks the government received was the in-sinnuation of the leader of the opposition as to the employment of spies, and the inauguration of a reign of terror.
Probably the government had made a mistake in taking the course they had and should have dispensed with enquiry. Hon. Mr. Laurier closed with an eloquent peroration in which he asked that the diamond jubilee of Her Majesty's reign be commemorated in Canada by peace and good will amongst all classes and parties.

Hon. G. E. Foster followed and Sir Richard Cartwright moved the adjournment of the debate at about eleven o'clock.

Mr. Champagne, the new liberal member for Wright, Quebec, was introduced immediately before the house adjourned.

The Ottawa Journal gives the parties in the house as:

Liberals,	120
Conservatives,	81
Patrons,	4
Independents,	3
Vacant,	5

Total 213

March 30th.

Monday's proceedings were a continuation of the unfinished debate on the address. Sir Richard Cartwright, minister of trade and commerce, led off in one of his characteristic efforts, in which he showed that had the late government gone through with their programme as set forth in the main and supplementary estimates, and paid the debts contracted during the year they would have brought the expenditure for the current year up to $43,000,000, instead of keeping it down to $37,000,000 as they had claimed in their speeches at the bye-elections. Davin followed for a couple of hours, but did not say anything. Monk, conservative, followed him and Casgrain, conservative, followed him. Casgrain attacked Fitzpatrick on his pledge on the school question. The routine business of the house included the introduction of rival bills to protect railway employees, by Messrs. Casey, (government) and McLean, (opposition). Also rival retaliation labor bills, by Messrs. Cowan (government) and Taylor (opposition). The unity of sentiment on these questions is as pleasing as it is surprising.

Fitzpatrick introduced a bill to repeal the present franchise act.
Tupper and Foster threatened obstruction if it was forced ahead of the tariff question. Laurier replied that the country had been appealed to on this question and had expressed a definite opinion, to which the government was bound to give effect.

McLean asked if the government was negotiating with the C. P. R. to abrogate its right to construct railways where it pleased and to charge tolls as it pleased. Also if the government was attempting to find out the actual cost of the C. P. R. Blair replied that the two first matters were under negotiation, but that the last mentioned was not.

Macdonald, (Huron) asked questions regarding the iron duty, evidently looking for a reduction.

Laurier told Davin that the government was considering the sending of a detachment of police to England for the jubilee.

Foster asked if the finance minister had divulged state secrets regarding the new tariff to the Kingston cotton mills, as asserted by the Mail. Fielding said he was not responsible for what the Mail said.

McInnis, (Vancouver Island), gives notice of motion to disallow the British Columbia act granting coal areas in the Crow's Nest Pass railway to the British Columbia Southern railway. McInnis is opposed to the C.
P. R. controlling the Crow's Nest Pass railway. Bostock also opposes.
Evidently the situation is getting interesting as Sir William Van Horne and Sir Donald Smith are both in the city, and are very attentive to members of the government and of the house.

Mayor Grady, of MacLeod, is here and will shortly be joined by J.
Courdry, of the same place, in an attempt to secure protection of the interests of the town of MacLeod in the building of the Crow's Nest Pass railway. Lethbridge will likely also be represented.

Reid, (conservative), gave notice of a resolution to bonus butter exported to England one cent a pound.

An abundant crop of Northwest railway charters seems likely to be harvested. The schemes extend from the Arctic Circle to the 49 parallel.

The Hudson's Bay and Pacific, to which a charter was granted last session, is after a bonus to build from Churchill to Lake Winnipeg. This company is sending an agent with the government's Hudson Bay expedition.

The Ontario and Rainy River railway is also after a bonus. Its object is to open up the newly discovered Rainy River gold mining region.

FORT SASKATCHEWAN.

A complimentary banquet was tendered to Mr. Frank Marriaggi, of the Maitland house, on Saturday night by a number of prominent citizens, to celebrate his return from the Kootenay. An enjoyable time was spent by all present. Frank says there are worse places than Fort Saskatchewan after all. There is a rumor that the Hudson's Bay Company are to put in a branch at this point. We hope the rumor is true as it would be a great convenience to the district, and we feel sure would be a success.

Const. Duggan and wife have arrived at the post here by last train.

A brisk demand has opened in this district for cattle of all kinds and several sales are reported at good prices.

If the BULLETIN were to publish regular market reports, its subscribers in the country districts would be glad.

At the last meeting of the literary society, H. Deby read the prospectus of the "Goose and Beaver Lake Chronicle." THE PLAIND DEALER EXPLAINS.

EDITOR BULLETIN.

A communication in your issue of April 1st, signed by F. A. Hardisty has particular reference to me as editor of the Alberta Plaindealer and demands a reply. Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to explain.

That your readers may understand what Mr. Hardisty took exception to, in the Plaindealer's report of a certain hockey match of recent date, I would quote the whole paragraph:

"The hockey match yesterday afternoon in Edmonton ended disastrously for the Shamrocks, the score being 9 to 3 in favor of the Thistles. The teams were the same as in the former game except that F. A. Hardisty took the place of J. A. Campbell on the Thistle team, and T. Hardisty played for the Shamrocks in the place of W. Blain, who was away on absence. T. Hardisty is a crack player on the Medicine Hat hockey team (champions of the Territory) who happened to be here with the special train. He is a relative of the Hardistys of the Thistle team. He was asked to play to prevent the game being cancelled in consequence of Mr. Blain's absence. It was a sad experience and another time the Shamrocks will play a man they know, or not play at all."

My first duty is to assume all responsibility for the above paragraph. The Shamrock hockey team had nothing to do with it either collectively or individually. The sentiments expressed are my own, and therefore if they are "unpleasant," as Mr. Hardisty alleges, I am the culprit and not the Shamrock team or any of them.

I am not surprised that Mr. Hardisty feels sensitive and wishes to vindicate the honor of his brother-in this matter, as opinions have been expressed by persons, who witnessed the game in question, not only from South Edmonton but from Edmonton and other places, that were not very complimentary to the conduct of his brother on that occasion, and evidently some such expressions have come to his ears. Feeling sore about what has been said he read in my brief comment on the game an accusation against his brother which was not intended. I expressed no opinion whatever as to the integrity of T. Hardisty, indeed I was not then and am not yet in a position to do so, as I did not see the game, and never saw the gentleman nor had any dealings with him. I consulted several eye witnesses of the game whose opinions were various, but all agreed that the Shamrocks would have done better with one of their own men; hence I came to the reasonable conclusion that the Shamrocks made a mistake in playing a man they had never seen before.

We all know that to have success in a game like hockey every man in a team must know his fellows. If T. Hardisty were as honest as the day is long, and I hope he is, and the world's champion at hockey, it would be a marvel if he could put up a good game under the circumstances, which I understand existed, having all his street clothes on, borrowed boots, skates and stick, a position in the field to which he was not accustomed, on a strange and irregular rink, with a team that don't pretend to know much about hockey and whom he had never even seen before. Every sportsman will admit that a second rate player known is better than a first rate player unknown in any game where team play is essential. The first and second inferences which Mr. Hardisty makes arise entirely in his imagination and are not warranted by my comment on the result of the game.

"In the next place they had not the manliness to say so to his face (they would have known better) but did so behind his back." The gentleman here uses plural pronouns and speaks of persons who have seen his brother's face, therefore I am not referred to and am not responsible for their conduct. If such persons have done as he says they deserve censure.

I am challenged to explain my meaning. I meant exactly what I said, nothing more, nothing less. If Mr. T. Hardisty wants "an explanation personally" I shall be pleased to give it to him, and I regret if I have wronged the gentlemen by the comment made. Thanking you Mr. Editor for your indulgence.

I remain

Yours fraternally.

J. HAMILTON McDONALD.
